

Socialist movement and dealing with democracy !

Democracy has no sanctity for the workers. The statement that the labor movement must fight for democracy !! isn't the statement of the anti-capitalist approach of the working class or communism of abolition wage labor of this class. The Democratic Revolution, the People's Republic, the Revolutionary Republic, and the Council Democracy, and the like, for the working class of a society in which capitalism constitutes the mode of production and the bourgeoisie forms the dominant economic and political class, it's only dark tunnels to evade the real struggle against capital. These tunnels have historically been excavated by approaches out-of-circuit of struggle against wage labor by populist communism, anti-imperialist nationalism, and the former Soviet camp or Pro-Chinese circles to take the proletariat out of its real class battlefield and make infantry of other movements. The conscious proletariat fights directly for socialism in every situation and at every level of readiness and every moment of its class struggle process. The proletariat puts the urgent socialist horizon in opposition to any kind of capitalist rule and civilization, and makes achieving this perspective the subject of its current class war, and that what achievements it dose make at each stage of its anti-capitalist movement or not, what level of political freedoms and social rights it imposes on the bourgeoisie or not, which amenities it will grab or not , it all depends on the day-to-day situation of its struggle, on the power of its struggle, on the extent of its cognition and consciousness, and on its degree of organizing and readiness to exercise power against capital. Its movement is anti-capitalist, and the prospect of its struggle is the abolition of wage labor, and it is a class war against capitalism and the capitalist state. Its solutions are a mechanism to oppose the existence of capitalism and to line up against this system, its organizing is organizing of its power against wage labor. This is how the conscious proletariat always looks at the movement, the goals, the current situation and the maze of its struggle. Step by step in this way , it doesn't open the misleading outputs of a democratic revolution or the establishment of a democratic republic and the like . To the best of its ability, it pushes the bourgeoisie back from its stronghold, and makes every step of this progress a trench for a more conscious, organized and powerful aggression against capitalism. No victory and achievement of this class war is a place to stop and accept any form of wage slavery survival . step by step this is just an arena for attacking as much as possible for the deepest exhaustion of the class enemy to achieve victory and the establishment of wage-abolitionist socialism. In the maze of this class struggle, there's no stage, stop revolution and no particular political structure and formation called democracy, because each of these would involve digging into a kind of exit from the anti-capitalist war and embracing some form of capitalist production, political and social order planning. The approach of abolishing the wage labor of the working class lays the foundation for all these demands , even its urgent demands , on the critique and denial of the objectivity of capitalism. Instead of proposing civil rights and democracy, it calls for the abolition of any kind of government over the workers. Instead of “democratically interfering in social destiny by people”, it calls for the direct and influential presence of all citizens in the definition of labor, production and social work planning, distribute the social product of work, the abolition of private property, and the abolition of wage labor, and etc. Instead of “free election and the democratic bourgeois governing, it calls for the replacement of any conventional government with the council socialist society by all citizens, and instead of unions and syndicates, civil and legal organizations it proposes labor and life councils of an anti-capitalist movement. The socialist tendency of the working class expresses itself as a socialist movement, a movement for the abolition of the current status, and puts the program of struggle and the practical course of its struggle as organizing the workers' council movement against wage labor. This is the indicative reformist deviation of the existing left that through reformist propaganda and the attempt to transform modernism and secularism , with reformist demands and democratic rights turn into workers demands it can not be leading to socialism or paving the way for workers' socialist revolution . The socialist revolution and the establishment of the Soviet labor organization for the abolition of wage labor are realized only by the will of the working class masses and which pursue socialism as a movement , and the conscious proletariat must fight against the basis of wage labor with a clear vision of socialism , a socialist critique of existing objectivity , and its current anti-capitalist demands . The opening of a period called the democratic revolution and the struggle for democracy and the establishment of a democratic republic have no place and no subject in the heart of this class struggle .

Naser Paydar, translated by S. Dylan

